Sponsorship and Exhibition Opportunities

International Whey Conferences (IWCs) built their reputations as meeting opportunities for the industry to receive and share updates on the latest advances in the science and technology of whey transformation into valuable functional ingredients. IWC2020, the 9th event in the series so far, will consider these advances within the framework of global developments. These include factors affecting the sustainability of the supply chain, innovation underpinning added value whey ingredient generation, and the increasing use of evidence-based research to support nutri-marketing claims. Consideration will be given to the challenges posed by competing protein sources.

The IWC2020 programme will emphasise the exchange of knowledge and experiences between the whey business community and scientists from around the globe with ample opportunity for networking and interaction.

A balance between technical and commercial contributions will aim, on the one hand, to present the latest scientific findings and processing technologies and, on the other, to inform scientists of the needs of whey processors and end users in order to exploit the potential of open innovation to address emerging challenges for the industry.
